

THURSDAY BOOK REVIEW

Today I shall review a book called "A Tree in my Village" written and illustrated by Paritosh Sen. He lived in Bangladesh.

In this book he remembers his village in Bangladesh where stood a very big Arjuna tree. He is very fond of that tree.

In the tree lived birds, insects, snakes, and langurs. The paintings make the tree look alive.

I liked the part where the black ants, carrying a grasshopper, fight with the red ants. One black ant at the head of the trail whispers to the other black ants, asking them to go back. They all go back! I liked the part where the ants whispered and listened to each other and then went back.

All of you must read this book.

(Reviewed by Mohana on August 7, 2014)

* * *